

Leeds Testing Atelier COVID-19 FAQ

General statement:

The Leeds Test Atelier will endeavour to go ahead on the 21st of April, 2020. If any government or international organisations advise to cancel events with our number of attendees, we will cancel. There are hand washing facilities at Wharf Chambers which we will be strongly encouraging people to use and if you have symptoms of the virus, please do not attend.

Will the Atelier still go ahead?

Yes, until Yorkshire is closed down, we will endeavour to go ahead. We will be following WHO Guidelines and the government's advice on whether we should continue. We have around 120 attendees, including speakers, therefore, until the restrictions on public events hit this number, we will continue as planned.

What if you have to cancel?

We will email you as soon as we know we have to cancel and post on Twitter and LinkedIn. If this happens, we will roll your tickets over to the next time that the Leeds Testing Atelier happens. We will aim to put the Atelier back on when the government and WHO tell us that it is safe to convene in large groups again.

Can I get a ticket refund?

Yes, you can! We will refund you the ticket price of £0 gladly. Seriously though, please let us know in advance so that we can reallocate the ticket and another keen tester has the chance to attend.

What will you be doing to reduce the risk of COVID-19 spreading at the Test Atelier?

If you have been to a country that has a high risk of infection, please refrain from attending the Test Atelier. If the country at high risk of infection is the UK we will be following government advice and WHO guidelines on whether we should go ahead. We are recording all the talks so you can watch them back after. They take a while to come online but we will email all people that were looking at attending. Wharf Chambers has hand washing facilities, please ensure you wash your hands according to the WHO Guidelines. You will be attending the Atelier at your own risk - but this is the standard statement from us. You risk fun and learning, but usually not a virus!

My work has advised me not to go to conferences, I can't come.

We are really sorry to hear that you can't attend but please let us know in advance and we will reassign your ticket.

What about the food? Is it a buffet? I don't want people touching my food.

That's OK, neither do we! We believe in great food hygiene which is why we order our food with Lean Lunch who have a 5 star hygiene rating.

All food is pre-packed to ensure no other people, besides Lean Lunch will be touching your food. We will be using disposable forks which are compostable.
